

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In the multi-priority re-sequencing method and apparatus, received data packets each have a priority class indicator and a transmission sequence number. The priority class indicator indicates a priority class of the data packet, and the transmission sequence number indicates a sequence of transmission for data packets of a same priority class. The received data packets are sent to the next processing layer in sequence based on the transmission sequence number and the priority class indicator of the data packets.